1. [REDACTED] of
NSA's personnel policy planning staff visited the [REDACTED] School on 22 December to discuss foreign language incentive award programs. [REDACTED] outlined the Agency's award program and its history and discussed with them the various problem areas in instituting such a program. NSA is interested in exploring a means of maintaining transcriber and translator skills by offering incentives for maintenance of skills by individuals who are no longer using them on the job. The NSA representatives expressed gratitude for the frank discussion of problem areas and proposed sending their draft of a program to us for comment at a later date.
